

TIM BAVINGTON TAKES A MEDITATIVE ROUTE IN HIS NEW MCQ WATERCOLOR SHOW

Tim Bavington makes music for the eyes.

Courtesy

C. Moon Reed

Thu, Dec 14, 2017 (midnight)

Even if you don't follow art, you probably know the work of Tim Bavington. "Pipe Dream," his colorful tube sculpture outside the Smith Center, has become a Downtown icon since it made its debut in 2012—not to mention the background of countless selfies.

The sculpture is a variation on his usual two-dimensional method. Bavington is famous for transliterating music (generally classic rock) into bars of color using an automotive spray gun to apply acrylic to canvas. The New York Times describes his work as "optically ravishing ... psychedelic hedonism."

The artist and UNLV professor has a new show at MCQ Fine Art Advisory, but it isn't as loud as all that. Titled Sounds of Silence, the show features a more meditative medium: watercolor. "It was exciting to see how Tim has used what can typically be a very quiet and traditional medium and bring it to new life through his use of color and technique," gallerist Michele Quinn wrote in a statement.

What led him to try watercolor? Teaching painting at UNLV. "I hadn't used the medium in a long time," Bavington says. "But through teaching it, I rediscovered its beauty. I'd forgotten about the magic of the liquid of the medium."

Bavington is always curious, reading books and even exploring the latest YouTube tutorials. Watercolor offered a new way of seeing and creating, a new chance to experiment and discover. "I would try different papers, I'd try different types of watercolor. It does require some investigation," Bavington says. He makes gradations with watercolor washes in the same way he would spray acrylic paints. But the return to the simplicity of water, pigment and paper offered a certain tactile joy. "I get to do a manual version. I get to use brushes and work on paper. The end result is a different experience—more intimate, handmade. It's nice to make contact with the surface, which I don't do on paintings."

The show's title references '60s-era Simon and Garfunkel music, and also nods to the quiet nature of watercolor. "It's the paradox or absurdity of making visual work based on sound," Bavington says, clarifying that none of the paintings are specifically based on Simon & Garfunkel's music ("that would be attempting something direct, too referential").

Instead, this show consists of works inspired by Maybelle Carter's "Wildwood Flower," Cream's "White Room," and music by Santana and George Harrison. "This year in particular makes you yearn for something spiritual and peaceful, which is again what the show is about," Bavington says. "Turbulent times create a desire for peace and serenity, and that's where I'm at. I [want] to give people in the form of an exhibit the wish that you must have at the end of this year: peace on earth."

Tim Bavington: Sounds of Silence Through January 5; Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m., free. MCQ Fine Art, 620 South 7th St., 702-366-9339.

Tags: Arts & Entertainment, Fine Art

SHARE 3

 C. MOON REED
C. Moon Reed never meant to make Las Vegas her home, but she found a kindred spirit in this upstart ...
GET MORE C. MOON REED

blu Laguna Niguel Apartment Homes
ELEVATE YOUR EVERYDAY
Up to 3 Months Free
LEARN MORE

MORE FINE ART STORIES

OPEN ART LAS VEGAS OFFERS A NEW SPACE FOR CREATION AND COMMUNITY

Medical doctor Daniella Etel Courban's new creation is now open on the second floor of Downtown's Arts Factory.

THE BARRICK MUSEUM RETURNS WITH TWO NEW SHOWS THAT REVEAL THE PREVIOUSLY HIDDEN

The public can view Ashley Hairston Doughty's 'Kept to Myself' and 'Excerpts: Works From the Marjorie Barrick Museum of Art' in person or online.

LAS VEGAS ARTIST ERIC VOZZOLA'S MEOW WOLF MURAL LOOKS TO WORLDS BEYOND

The funky, whimsical "Window Into the Multiverse" mimics a tear in the fabric of the universe. It's a little bit M.C. Escher, a little bit ...

Get More Fine Art Stories

ROCKET CAN
Congrats, you're approved!
20-Year Fixed
Rate 3.625%
Get Started
Images simulated and sequence shortened for example purposes only. Rate depends on day you lock your rate.
REPLAY NMLS #3030

THIS MONTH IN LAS VEGAS

TRENDING NOW

THIS MONTH

1. Slot player hits $3.9 million jackpot at Bellagio
2. Caesars Entertainment still planning to sell a Las Vegas casino, CEO says
3. Bill would extend Nevada unemployment benefits by 7 weeks
4. Lawmakers OK expanded eligibility for Nevada unemployment benefits
5. Lawyer: Las Vegas-area bars might open again midnight Thursday

Elevate Your Everyday
blu Laguna Niguel Apartment Homes
Up to 3 Months Free